From the Chaplain....

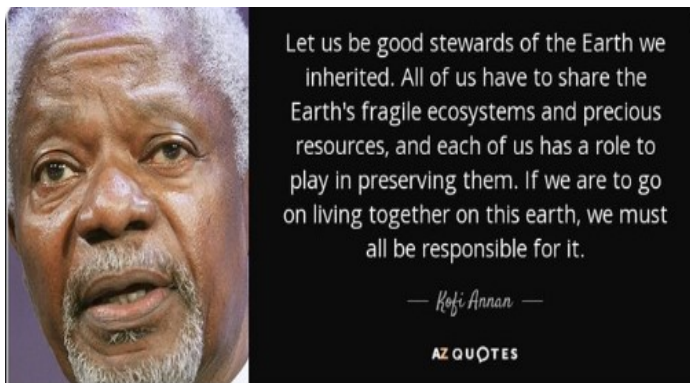

So God created humankind in his image, in the image of God he created them; male and female he created them. God blessed them, and God said to them, 'Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the earth and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea and over the birds of the air and over every living thing that moves upon the earth.' Genesis 1: 27-28

We consider this week the claim that we have been created to be good stewards. For generations there were those who read the above words from the book of Genesis and used them to defend actions which exploited the earth's resources without care or regard for the delicate balance of eco-systems. More recently we have interpreted the verses differently and today most of us would agree that we are in fact the temporary care-takers of a beautiful and diverse gift and that creation is ours to enjoy but to pass on without spoiling or diminishing it in any way. The idea that God has placed us on earth to take care of his creatures and our common home places us in a position of great responsibility. Even some of the small decisions we make on a daily basis affect people on the other side of the world: do the choices we make uphold the ideals of justice and sustainability?

As I write this I have just come in from the garden where a group of enthusiastic young gardeners meet twice a week to cut back the overgrown hedge, to dig weeds from the vegetable beds and to plant and care for seeds and spring bulbs. Their delight at being out in the fresh air and making a difference to the green space in our care is infectious. Their biggest delight is when they find a worm, or a spider or even, if they are lucky, a frog or a newt. These young people have not lost their ability to wonder and to marvel at God's creation. When I come back in from the garden my mood is always lighter and brighter for having spent time with them. My prayer is that we all might find a little time to stop and stare, to feel the wind and the sun on our faces, to notice the birds singing and the leaves turning golden and to marvel at the beauty, the diversity and the complexity of God's gift to us.

This week we have considered what it means to be created to be good stewards. How can we live up to this responsibility?

Created for a purpose

Exodus 3: 1-15

Moses and the burning bush.

At The King's CE School we believe that everyone is unique and created in God's image. We enable all to achieve their God-given potential; to grow, learn and aspire; to transform their lives and the lives of others and to journey in faith without limits within a unified, respectful and harmonious community.
